OOH-LA LOLLA

Lollapalooza wheeled out big headliners in its sixth year on the Chicago lakefront, as a record 240,000 people poured into Grant Park over three days to see 130-plus performers, including Lady Gaga, Green Day and reunited grunge-era icons Soundgarden.

The festival expanded its reach westward by shutting down Columbus Avenue and spreading eight stages across 110 acres, up from 80 acres in past years.

Generally the festival drew good reviews from fans and bands alike for its logistics (ample restrooms and concessions, with food curated by Chicago chef Graham Elliot Bowles) and an unbeatable view in the shadow of the city skyline.

The weekend was brought to a close by Soundgarden, playing its first Chicago show in more than a decade, and Montreal septet Arcade Fire, which took one of its first big steps toward international fame at the inaugural Grant Park Lollapalooza in 2005. TRIBUNE

TWEET OF THE WEEK

@lyssbarn: So we netflix-ed Jersey Shore since I've never seen it ... and my grandma wants to watch it. What's this world coming to? haha.

In the Web of Shore-ons

To Snooki, social media means drinking for the cameras.

My idea of Jersey Shore social media is tweeting and posting photos to Facebook as I play Skee-Ball with one hand and eat cotton candy with the other.

But I'm definitely in the minority. Now, when we talk about the Jersey Shore, we're most likely referring to the houseful of misfits doing everything they can to give the state they supposedly represent—and the one I grew up in—a bad name.

What might be worse is that "Jersey Shore"—the show and the characters—is having a huge effect on social media. Over at mashable.com, the site took a detailed look at social media stats from the night of "Jersey Shore's" season premiere and the numbers were pretty amazing. When the show began, social media monitoring service Row Feeder reported about 16,000 tweets about the show per hour. And when you consider there were about 4,000 tweets per hour for most of the day, and that about 21 percent of those came from New Jersey and New York, that number is even more impressive.

Add to that some big names on Twitter talking up the show and retweeting about it, including Jimmy Fallon and his 2.6 million followers, and you quickly begin to see that the social media impact is undeniable.

Interestingly, and almost impossibly, the buzz on Facebook was much lower, with only a few thousand posts per hour mentioning the show at any given time during the day. It seems impossible because the "Jersey Shore" presence on Facebook is huge, with more than 2 million users liking the "Jersey Shore" fan page, leaving hundreds and sometimes thousands of comments on nearly every post. But because Row Feeder's stats are specifically people posting "Jersey Shore"-related items on their Facebook walls, it seems a little more plausible.

And last but not least, MTV wants to make sure you've got your Snooki fix wherever you go. It's releasing an iPhone app called "Spread Snooki" that allows you to put Snooki's face or add a fist bump to any iPhone photo.

I find it hard to believe a single "Jersey Shore" character understands the effect the show is having on social media habits across the country. Actually, I find it hard to believe any of them have ever heard the term social media.

Maybe I can teach them. After all, I grew up going to the very beach they call home.

TALK TO ME

OK. Here's the situation. Are you appalled by the "Jersey Shore" effect in the social media universe? Tweet me, poke me—just tell me. Give you one guess how I answer that question.

Chicago's grocery quest

While some areas get more grocery stores and access to fresh food, other parts of the city are left in the dust

By Kyra Kyles

REDEYE

There is an oasis emerging amid the food deserts that once cut wide swaths across areas on the city's South and West sides.

The evidence is in recent headlines and initiatives undertaken by both the city and private retailers.

A Super Wal-Mart—to be stocked with fresh produce and groceries—will be built in Pullman Park after the retailer worked out an agreement with City Hall this month to pay higher wages—50 cents more than minimum wage—to workers at the location.

The controversial compromise paves the way for dozens of other Wal-Marts across the city, a spokesman for the retailer told the Tribune. Last week, the retailer got approval from the City Council Finance Committee to build a location in Chatham. The proposal now must go before the full council.

Not all are in agreement that the big box retailer is a positive addition to local communities. It took six years for supporters to get approval for the store, the second Wal-Mart within city limits. But others view the Wal-Mart decision as a sign of progress in the war against food deserts, an issue that came to the forefront in 2006 after Chicago-based researcher Mari Gallagher mapped areas in the city where fresh produce was scarce when compared with fast-food locations.

◀ FAR FROM FRESH

What areas of Chicago still are in need of fresh food options? The map shows areas where residents are hard-pressed to find fresh fruits and vegetables by community area, according to data from Mari Gallagher Research and Consulting Group, which defines food deserts as “large geographic areas that have no or distant mainstream grocery stores.” They are areas with “an imbalance of food choice, meaning a heavy concentration of nearby fringe food that is high in salt, fat and sugar.” The group's Chicago report was based on data from sources including Cook County and the Chicago Department of Public Health. For more information, visit marigallagher.com.

The data drew correlations between that lack of access and increased rates of obesity-related diseases, from hypertension to heart disease and certain types of cancers.

Gallagher will release an update on the state of food access in the city, perhaps as early as this month, she said, adding that it will feature some significant changes since her initial study uncovered a lack of access to fresh produce in areas including Roseland, West Englewood, Grand Boulevard and Washington Park. Chicago food deserts have shrunk approximately 1.4 square miles between 2006 and 2009, according to Gallagher.

"We do see a lot of improvement in the situation," said Gallagher, who is conducting similar research in other cities, including Detroit, L.A. and, most recently, Birmingham, Ala. In Chicago, city leaders seem to be listening to the story the data is telling, she said. "Still, we have a lot of ways to go to solve the problem."

RedEye took a fresh look at the state of food availability in the city, rounding up recent developments and exploring the new tools being used to address the issue.

More grocery stores

At least six retailers could put down roots in Chicago as a result of tax breaks, streamlined building processes and other incentives offered by the city, said Molly Sullivan, a city spokeswoman for community development.

Among those stores: an Aldi, with construction expected in 2011 at 115th Street and Michigan Avenue, Aldi spokeswoman Heather Tarczan said. This will join another Aldi, at 115th and Halsted streets. That was good news to Leticia Jones, a Roseland resident who said that although she drives to the Aldi on Halsted, she and other area residents want more choices.

"You see people riding these buses all the way down to the Jewel that's down the street," Jones, 29, said, referring to the supermarket at 11730 S. Marshfield Ave. "They're pulling these heavy grocery carts up and down bus steps. And it's hot as ever out here."

On the city's West Side: a Pete's Fresh Market, expected to open this fall at Madison Street and Western Avenue, according to Charles Poulakis, a spokesman for Pete's holding company.

"This is an area that has not had a grocery store in 40 years," Sullivan said. "So to get that store there is a huge achievement."

Alternative approaches to distributing fresh food

"Popping down stores" is not the only answer to making fresh fruit and vegetables more accessible to a larger number of residents, Sullivan said, pointing to several programs the city has initiated in addition to wooing retailers to Chicago. Some—including food stamp acceptance at some city-run farmers markets—are directed at low-income residents, who are much more susceptible to obesity-related diseases including diabetes and heart disease, according to Gal-lagher's findings.

This summer, those five city-run farmers markets—in Lincoln Square, Daley Plaza, on Division Street, at South Shore Bank and in Beverly—are improving the landscape for locals seeking diversity in their diet, Sullivan said.

LaDonna Redmond, an urban farming pioneer and Time magazine-recognized community activist, said that although increased access to farmers markets helps, that is just a start. "First of all, they are available for only a short window of the year," said Redmond, who lives in Woodlawn. She was inspired to start her own grocery initiatives after living an hour's CTA trip from fresh fruit and vegetables on the West Side. Redmond dreams of opening her own store someday. "What do these residents do for the other ... days?"

Delivering produce—one bag at a time

In April, a locally based grocery delivery service got into the game of eliminating food deserts. Peapod Grocers is offering discounted fresh fruit packages to residents in targeted areas—including Chicago Lawn and West Lawn—after being approached by community activist group Neighbor Capital, Peapod spokesman Scott DeGraeve said.

The baskets—10 pieces of fresh fruit for $3—are ordered by Neighbor Capital, which puts together group purchase orders from residents. The baskets then are dropped off at churches, schools and other public areas for those residents to pick up. It allows Peapod to serve areas not supported by their Internet-centric business model, while contributing to the community, DeGraeve said.

Redmond

"It's a couple hundred bags a week," said DeGraeve, Peapod's senior vice president and general manager. He said the company commissioned a study by Gallagher's research group to examine the link between scarce grocery supplies and obesity-related illnesses and was stunned by the rates of childhood diabetes in these so-called food deserts.

"It's going to be a long climb," DeGraeve said of the fledgling program, which he said may begin offering vegetables as well as paper products in coming months. "But we're making progress. This program has enormous potential."

FLOATING, AFRAID

SURVIVOR RECALLS STRUGGLE TO KEEP HEAD ABOVE WATER

Chicago Tribune

When she could no longer hear her friends' voices as she struggled to stay afloat in the cold waters of Lake Michigan, Kristin Masterson believed they were dead.

Either she would meet the same fate, or by some miracle, she would be saved.

She feared "I was going to be the only one [rescued], and I was going to wish that I had died."

Masterson, 19, was one of four friends involved in a boating accident that turned fatal after all four wound up in the water together, leaving the 31-foot sailboat Joan's Arc unanchored and unattended. James Shepherd, 21, an accomplished sailor whose grandfather owns the boat, drowned. Police on Sunday continued their search for the fourth boater, Chris Gary, also 21.

Both Masterson and Irene Rogers, 21, floated in the water for about five hours before three men out for an early-morning fishing trip rescued them.

"When you're out alone, and it's that quiet, your thoughts are the only things that exist," she said from her Hyde Park home Sunday, the hospital band still wrapped around her wrist.

The gathering on the docked boat began around 11:30 p.m. Thursday, Masterson said. The four of them tossed around bean bags, listened to music and Shepherd took Masterson out on a jet ski for the first time. There was alcohol, Masterson said, "but I wasn't intoxicated."

Around 1:15 a.m. Friday, they decided that if they were going to go out on Lake Michigan, they had better leave soon, Masterson said. About 15 minutes after setting sail from DuSable Harbor, Gary and Rogers jumped in the water and urged Masterson and Shepherd to join them, she said.

"So I did," Masterson said. About a second later, so did Shepherd, she said.

"My guess is it was a split-second lapse in judgment," Masterson said. "Before I surfaced, he was already swimming after the boat."

That was the last time she saw him.

She cried "Help!" Gary responded, saying: "Float on your back. You'll be OK."

Gary put his arm around Rogers, who was a poor swimmer, to hold her up, and encouraged her to keep her head above the water, said Rogers' father, David.

"He gave energy he could have kept," said David Rogers, whose daughter was released from the hospital Sunday and was not available for comment.

Kristin Masterson talks about her ordeal keeping afloat for hours in Lake Michigan after an early-morning boating accident Sunday. At least one of her friends died in the accident.

Man killed, 3 injured in park shootings

Shots rang out Saturday night during a neighborhood gathering at Ada Park in the 11200 block of South Ada Street, claiming the life of one man, injuring three others and sending panicked families racing back to their homes. Killed was David Buckner, 47, of the 600 block of East 89th Street, a former Morgan Park resident who neighbors said returned to the park to reunite with old friends. Police and witnesses said dozens of neighborhood residents were in the park at about 7:30 p.m. Saturday when two rival gangs began shooting. Buckner was caught in the crossfire.

Man shot during fight

A man was left critically wounded early Sunday morning when he was shot in the chest on the Far South Side, police said. The man, who is in his 20s, was involved in a fight with another man. He was shot in the 10300 block of South Wentworth Avenue, police said, after the other man left and returned armed with a shotgun and fired several times.

Teen killed, 1 wounded in West Side shooting

A 15-year-old boy was killed and a female was wounded in a shooting Sunday afternoon in the Austin community, officials said. The shooting happened at about 2 p.m. in the 4900 block of West Iowa Street, according to police. Troy Brown, 15, of the 200 block of North Laverne Avenue, was pronounced dead at Stroger Hospital, said a spokesman for the Cook County medical examiner's office. TRIBUNE

Safety features in works for notorious rail crossing

Chicago Tribune

A Chicago railroad crossing that is notorious for accidents and vehicles stopping on the tracks will be rebuilt this month to improve safety before classes resume for students who walk over the crossing to a nearby high school, authorities said.

Rail safety officials at the Illinois Commerce Commission also have strongly recommended that the city step up traffic enforcement to reduce train-vehicle crashes at the congestion-plagued Nagle Avenue crossing between Avondale Avenue and Northwest Highway on the Union Pacific Railroad corridor.

Vehicles can be seen stopped on the tracks at Nagle and many other locations across the Chicago area just about every day, demonstrating the tremendous risks drivers routinely take as well as pointing to the traffic saturation on roadways that can no longer safely handle increasing volumes.

Most of the more than 100 tickets issued to drivers in the past three years at the Nagle crossing for failing to yield to trains or for stopping on the tracks were written by Union Pacific police, not Chicago officers, records show. Twenty-seven citations have been issued this year through Aug. 2, said Union Pacific spokesman Mark Davis.

But wider-reaching safeguards are being put off because they are too expensive, officials said. The stronger measures to prevent vehicles from straying into the path of trains include building a bridge over the crossing or installing new electronic circuitry to improve the timing of crossing gates that block the tracks when trains approach, officials said.

Building a bridge "is the preferred option," said Michael Stead, ICC rail safety program administrator.

Instead, new signs, better pavement markings, new concrete crossing panels and other changes are planned between Aug. 23 and Sept. 3, officials said.

The primarily goal behind the changes is to grab the attention of motorists about the potentially deadly situation at the complex, high-volume rail-roadway intersection near the Kennedy Expressway.

The move follows a Tribune report on July 12 identifying the Nagle crossing as among the most dangerous in the Chicago region, based on accidents involving trains and vehicles. That same day, a Metra train struck a semitrailer truck that protruded onto the tracks and was blocked in by other vehicles when the traffic signal turned red and the railroad gates went down.

Oil work 'will continue,' feds tell Gulf residents

Browner
GETTY IMAGES

The U.S. government vowed Sunday that operations to completely clean up BP's Gulf of Mexico oil spill and compensate those affected would not slacken off despite the success in halting the leak.

A cement seal completed on the wellhead Thursday was holding, BP said.

Some Gulf Coast beaches and fisheries were reopening after the world's worst offshore oil accident, as optimism grew for a final kill of the blown-out BP well this month.

But in comments aimed at reassuring anxious Gulf Coast residents worried about their future livelihoods, response chief retired Coast Guard Adm. Thad Allen, and White House Energy Adviser Carol Browner, acknowledged that much still remained to be done to restore the oil-hit coastal region.

"We see this as a phase and not the end by any means," Browner told NBC's "Meet the Press."

"This has been the largest environmental response in the history of this nation and it will continue until it's done," Allen told CBS' "Face the Nation."

FACEOFF: 1995-96 BULLS VS. 2010-11 MIAMI HEAT

Turning up the Heat

THREE-HEADED MONSTER

WINNER: Bulls. Jordan=best ever. Pippen=one of the 50 best ever. Rodman=defensive machine/rebounding juggernaut.

OFF THE BENCH

Toni Kukoc. He was only the sixth man of the year.

Hard to see how the rotation will work in Miami, but Mario Chalmers, Udonis Haslem, Juwan Howard and Eddie House are among the candidates.

WINNER: Kukoc. Incredibly versatile at 6-foot-10, the Waiter averaged 13.1 points, four rebounds and 3.5 assists.

SHARPSHOOTER

Steve Kerr. Shot 51.5 percent from 3-point range that magical year, making 122 of 237 shots from downtown.

Mike Miller. A career 40.5 percent shooter from beyond the arc.

WINNER: Kerr. A season not likely to be duplicated on South Beach.

GIANT KILLERS

7-foot-2 Luc Longley, 7-0 Bill Wennington, 6-11 John Salley

7-foot-3 Zydrunas Ilgauskas, 6-11 Jamaal Magloire

WINNER: Heat. Big Z might be on the downside of his career, but he's still the best of these five.

COACH

Phil Jackson. Perhaps the greatest basketball mind the NBA has ever seen. Has 11 NBA titles to his credit.

Erik Spoelstra. Puh-lease.

WINNER: Bulls. The Zen Master cannot be touched.

ABC analyst says Miami will break Bulls' 72-win mark—is that possible?

RedEye

If you believe ABC's Jeff Van Gundy, the Miami Heat are one of the best NBA teams—ever.

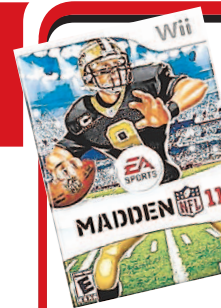

Van Gundy predicts the LeBron James-Dwyane Wade-Chris Bosh-led Heat will break the Bulls' 72-win mark set in 1995-96. Not only that, but he also said the Heat could break the L.A. Lakers' 33-game winning streak from 1971-72.

"They have put together a much better roster than anybody could ever have expected," Van Gundy told the Miami Herald.

"There is now no good way to defend them. They are unguardable. They are indefensible. They are just too good and have added so much shooting and are so versatile that they will score at will.

"And with Erik Spoelstra coaching, they will be in the top three defensive teams in the league as well. The other 29 teams better hope the lockout gets moved up a year."

Can they do it? Sounds like a RedEye faceoff. SOURCE: NBA.COM

1 How would you haze NFL rookies in training camp?	Make them play for Detroit.	Have them dress like Lady Gaga and walk around Lollapalooza.	Make them sit watch the extended "Lord of the Rings" trilogy with Elliott doing live commentary.	Everyone has to be Terrell Owens' sidekick for a day, just like Chad Ochocinco is gonna be all season.	For Bears rookies, isn't playing for Lovie Smith torture enough?
2 How could the White Sox decide on a closer?	Put them in a round room and tell them each to pick a corner. Last player to lose his mind wins.	Just sign Optimus Prime. I would imagine he's sick of dodging explosions on Wacker.	By giving the job to anyone whose name rhymes with "Hat Blornton"	Pit Jenks and Putz against each other in a hot dog-eating contest. Whoever can't finish is out.	What are you, a Putz? Because the Sox closer is.
3 How big is the Sox-Minnesota series Tuesday at the Cell?	Bigger than Lady Gaga's shoulder pads at Lollapalooza.	It's at least as big as Bobby Jenks' shadow.	Very important. I've heard Bobby Jenks even plans on showing up for once.	So big that the Cell will be at least two-thirds full! Hey yoooo!	So big that Favre is texting his teammates that he's returning to the Twins.
4 It's just preseason, but there's a Bears game Saturday. How cool is that?	Since it's the preseason opener, the coolest part is you only have to watch the first series.	Not as cool as a Blackhawks preseason game, but cool enough.	I'm so hyped, I've already started pregaming.	Come on, it's preseason, which makes it about as cool as the waistband in Brian's underpants.	Who has time for football with the thrilling Cubs season and Blago trial going on?
5 What would you suggest to Tiger Woods to get him through his career-worst slump?	Next time, keep it in your pants.	Option himself to the minors, or in this case the Nationwide Tour.	Um, start sleeping with cocktail waitresses again? Seemed to work fine before.	Watch "Happy Gilmore" then get in a fistfight with Bob Barker. That'll do it.	Take the "Mark Grace slumpbusting 101" class. Trip to Murphy's included.

Terrible Tiger

Disastrous Sunday caps Woods' career-worst tournament

Just when Tiger Woods thought his week at the WGC-Bridgestone Invitational at Firestone couldn't get worse, it actually did.

Woods shot a 7-over 77 on Sunday, his highest score of the week, and tied for 78th place out of the 80-player field at 18-over 298. He finished two shots out of being dead last at a tournament he's won seven times.

His 18-over par total was his highest score in relation to par after four rounds since turning professional in 1996. Woods' tie for 78th was also his worst position in a 72-hole event since his first professional event, the 1996 Greater Milwaukee Open, where he tied for 60th.

"Shooting 18 over par is not fun," Woods said after his round. "I don't see how it can be fun shooting 18 over, especially since my handicap is supposed to be zero."

Woods doesn't have much time to work on his game. The PGA Championship starts Thursday at

BUT HE'S STILL NO. 1

Tiger Woods managed to dodge one bullet this weekend. He will still be the No. 1 player in the world rankings after Phil Mickelson labored to an 8-over 78 on Sunday.

All Mickelson needed to do was finish fourth or better after entering the final round tied for 10th place and he would have held the top spot for the first time in his career. Instead, the world No. 2 shot a 41 on the front nine, didn't make his only birdie of the round until the 17th hole and dropped into a share of 46th place.

Whistling Straits.

"I need to be ready by Thursday," said Woods, whose 77 on Sunday matched his highest final-round score on tour as a professional. "It is what it is. I've got to be ready come Thursday, that's all that matters."

» President Obama shot hoops with NBA superstars on Sunday, a showcase for some wounded warriors and participants in the White House mentoring project. The Bulls' Derrick Rose and Joakim Noah were a few of the players, both past and present, at the event.

» Toronto's Brandon Morrow lost a no-hit bid with two outs in the ninth inning on a single by Evan Longoria, then struck out his 17th batter of the game to finish off a 1-0 victory over Tampa Bay.

FINAL SCORE

- » Fire O, New York O
- » Juan Montoya wins NASCAR Sprint Cup race at Watkins Glen.

Readers sound off on the latest Logan Square openings

Logan Square has long been on readers' radars as an up-and-coming 'hood for bars and restaurants. Now, as new spots peel off their "coming soon" signs and open to the public, the judgments are rolling in. Here's what you said about spots that have opened this year.

Got an opinion about a bar or restaurant? Find the venue at metromix.com to write a review.

Revolution Brewing

2323 N. Milwaukee Ave.
773-227-2739

Rotating taps featuring Revolution's own beers are the main attraction at this still-buzzing brewpub from Handlebar co-owner Josh Deth. Arrive early to snag a seat and sample the menu of pub fare.

YOU SAY

Great local bar and restaurant in Logan Square. ... The decor is very inviting. The service has been great the three separate times I have visited. I am a fan of not only the brewery's beer but also the long list of other craft beer and liquor available. The food has been solid too. A good reliable choice in the neighborhood. —SR FROM LOGAN SQUARE

We went on a Saturday night and it was packed to the rafters. We were able to get a seat at the bar by using our well-honed Big Star stool-grabbing skills. However, the food is mediocre and the overall atmosphere is very Lincoln Park. We were hoping for a little more character in the place and people and a little more spunk in the food.

—MARIANNE FROM WICKER PARK

Boiler Room
METROMIX FILE

Boiler Room

2210 N. California Ave. 773-276-5625

Pizza meets tricked-out decor at this new bar from the folks behind Simone's in Pilsen. Get thin-crust 'za whole or by the slice and an array of beers and drinks to wash it down.

YOU SAY

The beer selection was great and the prices very reasonable. There were a couple of specials (drinks and food), which was a nice touch. I ended up ordering a pizza with meatballs and giardiniera, as well as the Basic [pizza]. Both were delicious, but with such a delicious crust, it would be tough not to like any combination of toppings.

—CHI_GUY_1 FROM ANDERSONVILLE

The second I walked into the Boiler Room, I was impressed. However it was all downhill from there. The decor is imaginative and fun. The food is bland and unoriginal. There is no flavor in the pizza. Their cocktails are OK, as are the beers. ... There are better options in the area. —ZAHARA FROM LAKEVIEW

Ciao Napoli Pizzeria

2607 N. Milwaukee Ave.
773-278-7300

Opened in April, this eatery is focused on Naples-style cuisine, from gnocchi to Italian doughnuts to, of course, thin-crust, brick-oven pizzas.

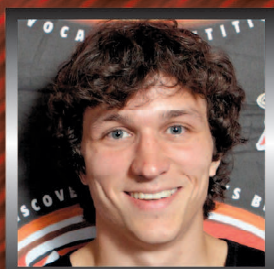

YOU SAY

The pizza was solidly good; not the best I've ever had, but not the worst either. Service was outstanding, and we all felt like it was a place worth visiting again. I'm glad to have a good restaurant like this in the neighborhood!

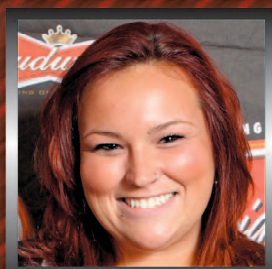

—NEGRAHAM0018035 FROM LOGAN SQUARE

Wanted it to be a great spot for Logan Square and Chicago, but go to Jewel and buy a frozen [pizza]. We love thin-crust, oven-baked "traditional style" over wood or coal. ... [This is] not even close. It's too bad; they really try to make it sound good on the menu. —BILL3368 FROM NORTHSORE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! Leo

July 23-Aug. 22
The new moon in your sign has you vowing to make major changes. You'll no longer date strippers. Never again will you go out with guys who live in their mom's basement. As God is your witness, you'll never be miserable again.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

You could have a heart-to-heart with your honey and learn some things you didn't know, thanks to the moon. Who would have guessed that your boyfriend almost became a priest? How could you possibly know that your girlfriend was once a guy? OK, so there were some clues.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You'll have a chance to strut your stuff as the sun encourages you to come out of your shell. You'll be given a reality show featuring you, your dog and your three girlfriends. Or you'll be asked to sing karaoke at your favorite bar.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You'll tell it like it is this week as Mercury inspires you to speak the truth. If your lover asks you if he's going bald, you'll say, "Yes." If your girlfriend asks if her boobs are too small, you'll respond, "Yes." There's a reason why nobody likes you.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

You're turning over a new sexual leaf, courtesy of the moon. You've had it with humdrum boyfriends or brain-dead girlfriends. From now on, you demand the very best. You'll date only rocket scientist types with killer bods.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Pluto has you acting hot and cold at the same time. One minute you're madly in lust with someone. The next minute you just want to be alone with your video games. Maybe somewhere in the middle you could find a balance?

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

The moon opposite your sign is bumming you out, big-time. You're disappointed in love and nursing some bloody wounds from your last romantic misadventure. Don't worry. You won't be down and out for long.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

You could experience some missed connections as Mercury continues to create havoc. Just when you thought you had lined up the ultimate hot date, your honey has to cancel. Or you'll send a lusty e-mail that never makes it to its recipient. Don't panic.

Aries March 21-April 19

Your lover can do nothing right. You can't stand how he leaves his smelly socks all over the place. You can't tolerate her tendency to stay on the phone gabbing with her friends until two in the morning. Venus opposite your sign is emphasizing your partner's flaws.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Just when you were wondering if you'd ever be sexually satisfied again, your honey shocks you with new levels of creativity. It's a good thing, too. Sensual Earth signs easily grow bored if their lovers fail to impress in the bedroom. Thank the moon for this improvement.

Gemini May 21-June 21

You know what you need to do. You just don't want to do it. Jupiter is making you hesitant about taking control of your love life, but push ahead. Break up with that dysfunctional guy or ask that wonderful soul mate to marry you. Just get on with it.

Cancer June 22-July 22

A new friend will offer flirtatious distractions this week, thanks to Venus. You'll make saucy suggestions or toss out lusty invitations, even though you hardly know this person. You're in the mood to throw caution to the wind.

THEORY AND CLINICAL UNDER ONE ROOF

A career as an ultrasound technologist can be a great choice for someone looking to start a new career or change careers but who doesn't want to go to school for a long time. Ultrasound Technology careers are very secure and once you have the skills to run an ultrasound machine you will be an invaluable part of the health care industry.

Now is your chance to become an ultrasound technologist. An education is very important to a career in ultrasound technology. Most ultrasound technology degrees are two-year degrees and many students finish their degrees at an accelerated pace.

An ultrasound technology degree will teach you skills such as:

- Medical terminology
- The care and use of an ultrasound machine
- How to administer basic medical tests
- Administrative skills

Successfully learning these skills will enable you to begin a new career in the important, vital world of ultrasound technology.

Stars in full view on Lolla weekend

about last night

larroyave
@tribune.com

GOT A TIP?

Do you have a hot tip on a celebrity sighting in Chicago? E-mail Luis or tweet him @luisarroyave.

The Hard Rock Hotel's Music Lounge is known for bringing musicians and party-goers together during Lollapalooza, so I can't really blame the confused 20-something guy who approached me in one of the VIP rooms in the early hours of Saturday.

"You're Mike Posner," he said.

Posner, an up-and-coming singer known for his hit "Cooler Than Me," had just performed at the Music Lounge's Belvedere Nights party, but the only things we have in common are our easy-to-maintain hairstyles and our rarely clean-shaven faces. Still, the guy was convinced I was Posner, so I of course responded the way anyone else should in that situation:

"Yeah, I'm Mike," I said. "Did you enjoy the show?"

Mean? Probably. Funny? Definitely. But don't feel too bad for the guy. He likely had plenty of real celeb encounters if he hung around the Music Lounge these past few days.

Perez Hilton hosted his "One Night in Chicago" concert in the Music Lounge on Thursday, which included an awesome performance by B.o.B (the fedora-wearing rapper performed at Manor later that night).

Ke$ha walked around the hospitality area Friday afternoon and contemplated getting inked at the Code of Conduct tattoo station before deciding against it. Hayden Panettiere, on the other hand, did go through with her tattoo plans at the station Sunday.

ABOUT THIS WEEK

- » The Black Eyed Peas will make an appearance at Enclave after Friday's show at the Allstate Arena.
- » Macy Gray will perform at Macy's Glamorama 2010 fashion show Friday at the Chicago Theatre.

Gossip Girl" co-stars Ed Westwick and Jessica Szohr stopped by the Cabo Wabo Tequila Lounge in the Music Lounge on Friday. They were also spotted at The Black Keys' after-party in Crimson Lounge later that night, as were Phoenix and The Strokes.

Speaking of The Strokes, lead singer Julian Casablancas had lunch at Sunda on Friday. The guys from Soundgarden, including Chris Cornell, had dinner later that night in Sunda's private dining room. MGMT, which performed at Lolla on Sunday, partied at The Underground on Saturday.

Neve Campbell had brunch at Hub 51 on Saturday before heading to see The xx at Lolla. David Arquette was seen at Hub and Crimson Lounge later that night. Campbell and Arquette were taking a break from filming "Scream 4" in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Campbell's former "Party of Five" co-star, Jennifer Love Hewitt, dined at Hub on Friday night and danced at Sub 51 afterward. Earlier in the day, she had lunch in Market's beer garden. Sugar Ray singer Mark McGrath opted for David Burke's Primehouse on Thursday.

Last, but not least, Lolla headliner Lady Gaga had dinner at Table Fifty-Two on Saturday. And unless someone was pulling the same stunt I did in the Music Lounge, Gaga was seen at Delilah's on Thursday.

As for our gullible friend from the Music Lounge, he told me he's an aspiring musician. He asked me how I got my start in the business, so I said the first thing that came to mind: "MySpace." I then bolted out of there before he brought his friends over, which he took as me—I mean Mike Posner—acting too cool for school.

Rihanna's party pressure

Rihanna is feeling the pressure to throw the best bachelorette party ever for friend Katy Perry. She told "Access Hollywood" she wants the pre-wedding celebrations to be as elaborate as the nuptials. "It's taking up way more time than my tour. It's so much pressure. Her wedding is going to be the best wedding I've ever been to, and now I have to match the bachelorette party to that!"

SNOOKI'S BOOZE NEWS

Snooki is downplaying her arrest for disorderly conduct as she boozed it up while cameras were rolling for "Jersey Shore." "I didn't hurt anybody—stuff like that happens in Jersey," she told reporters in L.A. during an MTV press event last week. She did admit that her "dad was very, very pissed. ... I just felt really bad, so I'm definitely going to stop drinking during the daytime."

Bateman

Don't tease us

The much-anticipated "Arrested Development" movie is looking like a go. Several members of the original "Arrested" gang have said they want the project to happen, and Jason Bateman recently revealed that he would like to bring Jennifer Aniston onboard. "I love it,"

Aniston told MTV. "I actually think I might have asked [Bateman] ... if that was possible. Anything to work with Jason," she said of her co-star in "The Switch" and "Horrible Bosses."

X-crement

Matthew Vaughn, who is directing the next "X-Men" movie, apparently thinks he's the right man for the job. Vaughn had been in talks to direct the third "X-Men" film, but that didn't work out and the project went to Brett Ratner. Vaughn is not a fan. "As it happens, I could have made something a hundred times better than the film that was eventually made," Vaughn told the Daily Telegraph. "It sounds arrogant, but I could have done something with far more emotion and heart."

Breaking up the gang

It's the end of the velvet rope for Ari Gold and company. HBO has announced that Season 8 of "Entourage," due to air next summer, will be its last, thr.com reports. "The plan right now is we'll finish up this season, we'll do a shorter order for next season—we've talked about six [episodes]," said Michael Lombardo, HBO programming president.

THE DIGIT

$35.6 million

That's the amount Will Ferrell's comedy "The Other Guys" earned in theaters, putting the funnyman on top of the box office charts.
